

CONTRIBUTORS

Gordon Bowen is Professor of Political Science and International Relations. He has published and spoken widely on international terrorism and other questions pertaining to the Middle East, Latin America and elsewhere. He contributed an article to the 2002 issue of VRAS.

Edward S. Krebs is an independent scholar and translator based in Georgia. He is author of Shifu: Soul of Chinese Anarchism.

Elizabeth Freund Larus is Associate Professor of Political Science and International Relations at the University of Mary Washington. She has written extensively on Taiwan.

Jennifer Manlowe is an Assistant Professor in the Philosophy Program at the State University of West Georgia and author of several articles, book chapters and books on Buddhism and related topics.

Daniel A. Metraux is Chair of the Dept. of Foreign Languages, Literatures and Cultures at Mary Baldwin College. He has published extensively on Japanese religion and politics.

Gerald Meyerle is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Politics at the University of Virginia. He has conducted research in India, Pakistan and Kashmir.

Khin Oo, a pseudonym, is a graduate student in International Relations at a major U.S. university. She is co-editor of the forthcoming book, Burma's Modern Tragedy.

Ruth Rowe is an Honor's Student at Mary Baldwin College who has studied in Kenya, Australia and Morocco.

Elizabeth Saylor has worked in political and humanitarian aid projects around the world, primarily in the West Bank of Palestine, and on political campaigns in Singapore and New Zealand. She has also taught in Tibet and at the college level in Palestine. Saylor's focus is on Islamic and Middle Eastern affairs, particularly in the areas of democracy and human rights, on which she frequently writes and speaks. She is currently pursuing a degree in International Relations at Mary Baldwin College, with a concentration on the Middle East.

Ornuma Wawsri is a visiting scholar in the Religious Studies program at the University of Virginia.

Wei Zhang is an assistant professor of Asian religions with the Department of Religions at the University of South Florida. She received her Ph.D. in East Asian Studies and Comparative Literature from the University of Minnesota in 1996. Research interests include Buddhist philosophy, Daoism, and Chinese medicine, the comparative study of religious thoughts and movements and hermeneutics of cross-cultural understanding. Her book, Heidegger, Rorty and the Eastern Thinkers is forthcoming.