

CONTRIBUTORS

Richard Bethune is an Asian Studies student at the University of Virginia.

Jeff Bolander is a Graduate Student at the University of Virginia.

Cathryn A. Brieske, now serving in the Peace Corps in Mauritania, is a 2005 graduate of Mary Baldwin College.

Gordon Bowen is Professor of Political Science and International Relations at Mary Baldwin College. He has written extensively on issues pertaining to U.S. foreign policy toward terrorism in the Middle East and Central America

Roselee Bundy is Associate Professor of Japanese Language and Literature at Kalamazoo College.

Laila Nasser Daher is a 2006 graduate of Mary Baldwin College.

Wilton S. Dillon is a Senior Scholar Emeritus at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington DC. Dillon, an anthropologist, for many years directed the Smithsonian's Office of Seminars and Symposia.

Lucien Ellington is Co-director of the Asia Program and UC Foundation Professor of Education at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga. Ellington is founding editor of Education About Asia, and author of three books including Education in the Japanese Life-Cycle: Implications for the United States (1992) and numerous articles on Japan. He has served as editor of ABC-CLIO's Asia: A Global Handbook Series. Ellington has also served as a consultant for over 100 teacher institutes on Japan throughout the United States and co-directed many study tours of Japan for schoolteachers.

William Fleming is a doctoral student in Asian Studies at Harvard University.

Hal W. French is currently Distinguished Professor Emeritus with the Dept. of Religious Studies at the University of South Carolina where he continues to teach. He has published extensively in the area of South Asian religions and involved in a major research project, the production of an Encyclopedia of Hinduism where he serves as a member of the Board of Editors.

Steven E. Gump, Illinois Distinguished Fellow in the Department of Educational Organization and Leadership at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, has written on a wide range of topics within the fields of education, international business communication, Japanese human resource management, and Japanese religion. Much of his current research focuses on yet another area: scholarly publishing and the history of university presses in North America.

William Head is Chief Center Historian at Warner Robins ALC, Robins AFB, Georgia. This year he is serving as President of the SE Chapter of the Association for Asian Studies.

Randi Huo is a 2006 Honor's Graduate of Mary Baldwin College where she minored in Asian Studies.

Ray Dongryul Kim completed his doctorate in Government at the University of Virginia in 2006. He has taught as an adjunct professor at the University of Virginia and at Mary Baldwin College.

Daniel A. Métraux is Patricia H. Menk Professor of Asian Studies at Mary Baldwin College and Editor of SERAS. His most recent book, Burma's Modern Tragedy (co-edited with Khin Oo) was published in 2004. He received a Fulbright for scholarly research in China in 2006.

Dominic Nardi graduated from Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service in 2005 and is currently doing a joint degree with Georgetown University Law Center and Johns Hopkins-SAIS Southeast Asian Studies program. He has a special interest in environmental policy in Asia and has conducted research and done internships in throughout the region.

Tom Pynn is Instructor of Philosophy at Kennesaw State University. His primary areas of intellectual interest are Asian philosophy, aesthetics, philosophy of literature, and philosophies of peace.

Roxanne Russell, a 2005 Honors graduate of Mary Baldwin College in Asian Studies, received a Fulbright award for a year of research and study in Japan. She is studying the phenomenon of suicide in contemporary Japan, especially as it is portrayed in postwar Japanese literature. Her paper on Suicide in Japan won an Honorable Mention in the 2005 SEC/AAS undergraduate paper competition.

Chizuru Saeki is Assistant Professor of History at the University of North Alabama.

Carol Walker is a doctoral student at Georgia State University.

Jim Yoxall, a graduate student at Vermont College, has team-taught courses on Chinese history and Buddhism at Mary Baldwin College and has spent recent summers teaching in rural Chinese schools. He and his wife have an adopted Chinese daughter and will soon have an adopted Chinese son as well.